| Sanitized | Copy Approved for Release 2010/06/28 | 3 : CIA-RDP85T00287R000500040001-4 |
|-----------|--------------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 1 | 17 11 | |

| 25X | 1 |
|-----|---|
| | |
| | |

Ime Jeb I 1601

OGI International Financial Situation Report #21 ALA/SAD/R/ 18 October 1983

25X1

ARGENTINA

Buenos Aires suffered a major setback in its efforts to resolve its debt problems last month. On 27 September, a federal judge in a remote province declared the rescheduling agreement for the state airline--a model for future reschedulings and a prerequisite for immediate loan disbursements--illegal citing violations of national sovereignty. The judge's actions, which included the temporary arrest and questioning of the central bank president, threw a scare into international lenders. They also caused a delay in disbursement of a $1.5 billion commercial bank medium-term loan, necessary to repay a bridge loan arranged last December. Although the Bignone government moved rapidly to overturn the judge's ruling, the blow to banker confidence increased pressure to delay further reschedulings until members of the new government to be elected on 30 October can be included in discussions with bankers.

25X1

Meanwhile the Argentine economic team is struggling to avert liquidity problems. The traditional fourth quarter decline in exports is straining Buenos Aires' ability to meet cash obligations. With its earnings slowed, Buenos Aires had to draw down foreign reserves to near $200 million to bring bank interest payments current as of 30 September required to

25X1

ALA M 83-10166 C

BRAZIL

Prospects for concluding an IMF accord recently have been jeopardized by a rebellious Brazilian Congress that has threatened to repeal a key wage restraint law (2045) which limits wage hikes to 80 percent of the consumer price index. According to the US Embassy, a rising tide of public protest against the wage law coupled with congressional rejection in late September of a different but analogous decree have raised the likelihood that a similar fate will befall decree-law Despite the congressional setback and strong prevailing popular resentment against the policy dictates of the IMF, the administration is mobilizing to meet its commitment to legislate wage restraint. According to another US Embassy report, decree-law 2045 will be withdrawn and replaced by a broad-ranging new decree-law which covers virtually the gamut of economic policy. The replacement would include wage control provisions that would balance out essentially the same as 2045 but fall heavier on the upper income brackets than on those in the lowest wage catagories. The government party has been given a prominent role in seeking to negotiate such a broad policy decree, has the power to keep the main lines of its wage policy intact and, according to the US Embassy, will do so.

25X1

25X1

25X1

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/06/28: CIA-RDP85T00287R000500040001-4

3/

4/

5

25X1

Any delay in enacting the wage decree-law will also hinder Brasilia's ability to obtain the an additional $16.5 billion in loans that has been tentatively committed by international creditors to meet its foreign financing through 1984. This new arrangement includes: (a) an agreement by the foreign bank advisory committee for $6.5 billion in new loans as well as $5.5 billion of 1984 principal reschedulings; (b) tentative pledges of $2 billion in rescheduled debt for foreign governments in the Paris Club; and (c) $2.5 billion in loan

| Despite difficulty in securing foreign funds in 1983, sogota is launching a major fund-raising drive for over $3 poillion to finance development projects over the next four years. The request for these funds will be presented at the consultative Group meeting in Paris from 17-19 October. Dankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic development prospects. | Despite difficulty in securing foreign funds in 1983, ogota is launching a major fund-raising drive for over $3 illion to finance development projects over the next four ears. The request for these funds will be presented at the onsultative Group meeting in Paris from 17-19 October. bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | • | |
|--|---|---|-------------|
| bankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting to ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | ogota is launching a major fund-raising drive for over $3 illion to finance development projects over the next four ears. The request for these funds will be presented at the onsultative Group meeting in Paris from 17-19 October. bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | COLOMBIA | |
| bankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting oayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | illion to finance development projects over the next four ears. The request for these funds will be presented at the onsultative Group meeting in Paris from 17-19 October. bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | Despite difficulty in securing foreign funds i | n 1983, |
| bankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting bayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development crojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | Bogota is launching a major fund-raising drive for | over $3 |
| bankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | billion to finance development projects over the ne | xt four |
| bankers remain concerned about increasing their exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the possibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | bankers remain concerned about increasing their xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | years. The request for these funds will be present | ed at the |
| exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the possibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | Consultative Group meeting in Paris from 17-19 Octo | ber. |
| exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the possibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | | |
| exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the possibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | xposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in meeting ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | | |
| Dayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the cossibility that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | ayments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns auguring the ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | bankers remain concerned about increasing t | heir |
| considering that Colombia will join other South American countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | ossibility that Colombia will join other South American ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | exposure in Colombia. They cite growing delays in | meeting |
| countries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | ountries in rescheduling its external debt under IMF auspices ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | payments and rapid foreign exchange drawdowns augur | ing the |
| next year. A failure to obtain credit for the development projects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | ext year. A failure to obtain credit for the development rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | possibility that Colombia will join other South Ame | rican |
| coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | rojects would heighten prospects for a debt rescheduling in oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | countries in rescheduling its external debt under I | MF auspices |
| coming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | oming months, and undermine Colombia's longer-term economic | | |
| | | | |
| levelopment prospects. | everopment prospects. | | economic |
| | | development prospects. | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

| • | |
|---|--------|
| VENEZUELA | |
| | 2 |
| | |
| | |
| | |
| At present levels of spending, Caraca | s will |
| run an estimated 5 percent deficit next year confronting | |
| new administration taking office in early 1984 with tough | h |
| decisions on retrenchment. | |
| Caracas is belatedly taking steps to clear past due | |
| payments, another contentious issue with the IMF. Last | month, |
| Venezuela's Council of Ministers established a committee | which |
| would allow the Central Bank to release dollars at the | |
| preferential rate for $400-600 million in overdue intere | st |
| payments on private debt. Because of this move, the ban | kers |
| have given Caracas another 30-day deferral on the repayment | ent of |
| public debt principal. Bankers have stipulated that all | |
| interest arrearages on private debt must be brought curr | ent by |
| 31 October if Venezuela expects to receive an additional | 90-day |
| grace period on the repayment of public debt principal. | |
| | 2 |
| This move, however, has not stilled criticism of the | e |
| government's handling of the current financial crisis. | The |
| presence of Central Bank representatives on the committee | e and |
| | |

the requirement for vote unanimity in determining business eligibility for preferential exchange rates has raised concern about a frequent Central Bank veto. Businessmen fear a continuation of the present administration's bias against settling private obligations quickly and continued difficulty in securing trade credits necessary to ensure vital imported supplies. In the closing weeks of the campaign for December's presidential election, this issue is taking on political overtones. The national labor confederation and even the governing party's presidential candidate Rafael Caldera are openly siding with the private sector, while only the leftist political parties are supporting the government on this issue. The victorious candidate will need to accommodate the private sector demands for the subsidized exchange rate if he is to avoid strong criticism.

2

5

5

25X1

25X1